Dolls are undergoing rejuvenation and being outfitted this week. Burnell Drummond offered to drive the boys to Brant and aided them with their work, for which they are most grateful.

Boost Kirkcaldy Training Field

Reports that Hon. Peter Dawson, M.L.A., of Champion, is investigating the possibility of a pilot training field being opened at Kirkcaldy brings to light the fact that the Vulcan Board of Trade communicated two weeks ago with the Western Air Command at Vancouver and Hon. C. D. Howe, Minister of Transport, Ottawa, urging that the Kirkcaldy field be considered as a training field for pilots in the Empire training scheme.

Vulcan would benefit considerably if the Kirkcaldy field was selected as one of the Alberta training points and the local Board of Trade is keeping in touch with the situation.

"CHAFF"

BY STUBBLE-JUMPER

Who was the young lady who mistook the coffee shop for a filling station and tried to run her "lizzie" in the front door?

Gather around, children, because we have the duckiest little story to tell you about the boys at gym class. Yes, sir, they have taken up folk dancing with the ladies in quite a serious way and can be seen every Tuesday night flitting across the gym floor doing the dance of spring. Next week they cut out paper dolls.

We have it on good authority that a group of five people can go to a hockey game at Calgary, all expenses paid, for $10.79. Further particulars can be obtained from one of the petrol supply stations.

That big bridge game we mentioned last week was played over again about ten times when the participants met next day to discuss it. It appears that Melver is a hard man to hold down once he gets bidding. Remember, Mac, two kicks in the shins means "bid no trump."

Who is the young feller in the Texaco service station who went snooping around and found what his girl friend had bought him for Xmas? You should look into this Santa Claus business, J. D.

We heard quite a few young fellers breathe a sigh of relief that they weren't dancing out in the 'country last Friday night.

"Who was that gentleman I saw you with last night, Jean?" "That was no gentleman, that was a grocery clerk."

We heard recently that our good friend Doc Carson Jr., up in Edmonton, reads this goofy column. How are you Doc? You should be much improved at carving the turkey when you come home for Xmas this year.

Claude Brodrick became peeved while changing a tire one night and showed his teeth—but he put them back in his pocket again.

We wish Ralph Pritchard would get sore and throw a couple of loads of dirt around the centre post. He is going to install shock absorbers on his "carriage" because he claims the bumps make him seasick.

WE SAW—Lonesome Lorne Leverington hunting around for a heart game. . . . Tommy Brooks and Keith Fisher upside-down on the gym floor. . . . Bruce McKay being escorted around by his flat-faced pooch. . . .

Owen Hickman discussing the world situation. . . . Ken Holstead lending his valuable advice to 'Rus Robson. . . . Bob Simington chasing a chicken down the street.

Hogs Rise and Shine

ONE cheerful prospect on the horizon at present for farm folk is the assurance that Britain is a dependable market for hogs. British needs, as set up to October 31, 1940, are placing a demand on Canada for a steady output, considerably in excess of exports of recent years. But the cautious farmer is accepting this good news with moderation. He feels that all over Canada farmers will be greatly increasing production; and there will be a tendency to launch excessively into this one apparently profitable phase of the industry. If everyone expands greatly, there will again be danger of overproduction. One reason for increased requirements of Britain is said to be the transportation difficulties which are affecting Danish producers and others in the sea zones, most seriously affected by war. Such conditions may not prevail indefinitely, and the basis of present agreement with Britain expires in less than a year. Britain may have good reason for renewing bacon trade with Denmark.

However, Canada is in position to impress the British market favorably with her output. In the past Danish producers have catered very definitely and also successfully to the British bacon taste, with the added virtue of a consistent output. Canada now has opportunity to show what she can do in supplying an equally satisfactory service.

One weakness of Canadian production, in contrast to highly organized Denmark, is the lack of regulation and co-operation. The producers of Ontario and Quebec will expand, those in the Maritimes will do the same; western provinces will follow suit, each individual farmer following his own individual hunch. This seems to be a case in which some form of regulation is required to safeguard the overenthusiastic and provide some assurance to the cautious that he will not be left floundering in an unprofitable sea of hogs. Granted that Canada agriculture does not lend itself so neatly to regulation as a more compact country, it even now has abundant machinery for going forward on a less hazardous basis than now prevails.

The collapse of prices following the last great war, proved that trusted authorities were not always infallible. At present it would appear that the home market at 9 cents a pound or thereabouts would be profitable. Dairying also seems likely to be profitable under war conditions. But in any farm expansion, whether it be in land or stock, the farmer would do well to go cautiously, and clean up as he moves.

A Turkey Dirge

THE war has upset many a calculation, not least of which is dependence on British demand for Canadian poultry. These prime birds are of little consequence in face of need for war material, and they are not making their customary pilgrimage abroad. So the Canadian market is at present flooded with turkey. The king of birds is no longer king. He is superseded even by chicken, and is something lower in relative price than pork or beef. This situation is revolting to all who cherish the sentiment that the turkey should remain on the heights as the luxury bird—something special, to be associated only with high feast days, and not with commonplace meals.

Aside from the sentimental angle of this decline in prestige, is the practical fact that the turkey is worth more than current prices are bringing, from any standpoint, the delicacy of the meat, the labor involved in bringing the bird to market condition, the amount of feed it consumes in a season.

Turkey raising seems to fall primarily to the women-folk, and no urban dweller can realize what toil is involved in bringing a flock through the first six weeks. Last June in particular was a most difficult month, involving great labor and anxiety because of the cold, wet weather. Any woman, who keeps check on the hours she spent in feeding and keeping the birds sanitary, who checks also the feed, which is very special in the early and later stages of growth, will find that her birds have brought poor returns this year. Thirteen cents a pound or less eliminates all profit. She may feel her time would have been better spent if she had sat with folded hands.

Christian Church and War

WAR brings a dilemma to ministers of the Christian church in the belligerent nations. Prayers for victory ascend from pulpits on both sides and there is little else that ministers can do. True, there are some instances, such as that of the seventy-five protesting clergymen of Ontario who have come out against the war, but to follow such a course generally would prove disastrous to the Christian churches.

It might be the best thing for Christian ministers to confine themselves to solacing, comforting the people in general, and exercising a leavening force for good wherever they can, rather than taking too much of a decided stand in the matter of the war, such as did the Ontario ministers. The public temper is ugly during war-time and ministers must deal kindly and considerately with the shortcomings of human nature.

In connection with this whole vexed problem, an editorial in The Winnipeg Free Press quotes a verse from a British poet. If the Free Press thinks it not blas-

Pertinent Topics

DISCUSSED BY H. C.

Most deserving of honor are the men of the mercantile marine. They do not belong to the "services," but when Britain is at war, they carry on amid the perils of mine and torpedo. The only time they threatened to strike during the last war was when Ramsay MacDonald, then a pacifist, wanted to attend a peace conference in Stockholm. Many of those who escaped shipwreck and death in that campaign are on duty again amid even greater dangers. We do not know the figures, but venture the guess that their casualties are greater so far than those in any of the services. They follow the traditions of the sea, knowing full well the enemy does not; and sometimes in the nature of his craft, can not. Engaged in a peaceful occupation, they encounter with stout hearts, the hidden hazards and sudden assaults of modern warfare.

Our density is such that we cannot see why Britain and France should sweep the seas of German mines so that Dutch ships may carry German products to neutral countries where Germany can get foreign exchange that will enable it to go on sowing mines in the north sea and English channel that may wreck Dutch ships engaged in that or any other line of sea-borne commerce. If they want to carry on, the least thing they can do is to lend a hand in the mine-sweeping.

A Canadian newspaper thinks Communists in other countries will turn against Stalin because of his brutality to Finland. It does not know the Communists. They take their inspiration and orders from Moscow and ask no questions. How many of them deserted because of Stalin's alliance with their hated enemy? They are counting on his bolshevizing Finland as he is now bolshevizing Poland.

Henry Ford says the best pay he ever got in his life was experience, which, he adds, is the most valuable thing in the world. Living now on borrowed time, the old man's mind goes back to the Dearborn Independent instead of the Ford Motor Co.

He is wrong just the same. His experience with the Peace ship was not of much value to him when he and Lindbergh launched a crusade against any change in the neutrality laws. "Experientia" doesn't always "docet" and a burnt child doesn't always fear the fire.

What do the Labor party, the Duchess of Athol and the rest think now of the agitation they carried on for two years against Mr. Chamberlain because he would not intervene in the Spanish war? Germany and Russia intervened on opposite sides, and Mr. Chamberlain was pressed to intervene on the side that Stalin sponsored. That war is now over, Hitler and Stalin have coalesced and two other wars are on, with Spain a neutral benevolent to the Allies. If Chamberlain had taken their advice, it would have cost many lives and millions of pounds and Spain today would have a government owing allegiance to Stalin. Whether this would have affected the subsequent line-up no one knows, but gratitude to Britain for her help would not have been a factor.

What we do know is that France needs no troops along the Pyrenees and she and Italy have withdrawn their forces from the French-Italian borders. Would this have happened if the Spanish issue had, with the help of Britain and France, gone the other way? The answer cannot be given without first deciding another question: Would Stalin in that event have joined up with Hitler? We think the answer is yes. A Stalin victory in Spain would have made the alliance more probable, and it would have made it a certainty that France would have to defend two if not three borders.

It is all very well to argue that every country has the government it deserves and that therefore the whole German people must be held responsible for the crimes of its government. We do not know that the German people would have turned out the Nazi government if they had the chance, but we do know they did not have the chance. That they must all be held responsible for the government's actions does not take into consideration those who escaped into exile, those who were killed or imprisoned and the larger number that saved their lives and liberty by silence and passive obedience. We still believe the older generations were against war, but what can they do now? Their sons are in the army, navy or air fleet.

What a tangled skein the historian will have to unravel when he writes the history of the past few years! Italy and Japan sign an anti-Commintern pact with Germany, and in a year or two Germany lines up with the Commintern. Germany and Russia make peace pacts with neighbors and in a short time are at war with them. Italy makes a sudden raid on a neighbor and in a year finds fault with Russia for doing the same. Russia and Germany call each other all sorts of vile names and a few months later are hand in glove. Hitler and Stalin fight each other in Spain and next year are cheek by jowl. One year, Mussolini is angrily denying Italian intervention in Spain; next year he is welcoming back his legions and boasting of their achievements. One year he joins in the hunt for pirate subs; next year his press glories in the fact that they were Italian and that they sank ships carrying supplies to the enemy in Spain. The historian will have to devote a chapter also to the dates upon which Hitler gave promises and assurances and the dates upon which he broke them. When people become civilized and read the history of the past few years, they will be apt to conclude that the historian lied or that several countries in Europe had fallen under the control of liars, gangsters, killers and racketeers.

Not once or twice in her rough island story has Britain sent troops to protect missions and missionaries in Asia and Africa. We do not know whether the clergymen who signed their names as "witnesses against war" ever objected to that. They must realize now that Britain is fighting against an enemy more heathenish than the yellow or black fellows.

Tuberculosis And The Teen Age

Christmas Seals Are Means of Defence Against Enemy of Youth

Perhaps the toughest assignment handed us today is to protect the health of our adolescent boys and girls. They are impatient of restraint. The adult world is wide open to them. They look big enough and strong enough to take it, which they are not. They want to live the lives of playboys and glamour girls while also going to school or holding down jobs. Nature, sometimes an ally on whom one can count to do the right thing, is no help here, simply egging them on to spend their energies like drunken sailors. If they are to be protected and brought into healthy maturity, we have got to do it.

One of the greatest hazards between them and that healthy maturity is tuberculosis.

Much of our work is still ahead, and it is difficult work because we are not dealing any longer with children who expect to "mind their mothers," even if they resist, but with rebellious people who look grown-up but are not, and who cannot be handled by being told in black and white what not to do. You cannot meddle directly in the affairs of an adolescent.

Tuberculosis is catching, like mumps or any other contagious disease, so the first step is to look for it in the circle in which your youngsters live. Be sure they are not in close and affectionate contact with old people who have "chronic bronchitis" or any similar complaint, unless you have found out by medical examination, which must include X-ray, that the ailment is not a slow form of tuberculosis which old people frequently have. Insist that teachers undergo similar examinations each year.

What to do in home care. First, you can run your home so they get eight hours sleep a night. If there are late hours during the week-ends, let the youngsters sleep in the mornings even if you do feel that they ought to be up and at work. You can even encourage a little loafing as an antidote to over-activity. You can put on the table plenty of resistance-building food—eggs, milk, fruits and leafy vegetables. You can help them not to worry about social success, first, by

Nazi Censors Weather

The Nazi government has begun censoring Czech weather reports because the official Czech weather bureau issued the following forecast: "Cold and rain will continue for some time but fine weather is approaching. Cloudy in Germany, with the likelihood of disturbances." Evidently, the Czechs have a sense of humor, and that is a great help in nasty weather. —Barrie Examiner.

Fascist Slave Market

Today is a grave day for democracy. Today forced the democratic world closer to arbitrament of arms in the bigger question of whether any people, joined by racial and cultural ties, living in peace, one with the other and with their neighbors not of the same stripe, may continue to so exist. Canadians, welded to the democratic way of life and anxious that it should remain in full force, have decided. Our way is with democracy. Fascism reeks of the slave-market, and its crimes stink to high heaven. Communism, as exemplified by Russia, is no better.

In the glare of burning Helsinki and dying Finland, Canada's path is pitilessly clear. The right to live our own lives in our own way is again up for renewal. —Kamloops Sentinel.

Free Book From McCleary Clinic

Any one afflicted with hemorrhoids (piles), fistula, non-malignant rectal ills of any kind or colon troubles, would do well to write the McCleary Clinic, E-100 Elms Blvd., Excelsior Springs, Mo., for a copy of a book published by that institution. The book is full of valuable information—explains the nature of rectal ailments of various kinds, cautions against possibly harmful procedures, and offers suggestions helpful to any one suffering from these common ills.

The McCleary Clinic is the largest institution of its kind in the world, specializing exclusively in rectal and colon cases. Its treatment is known to thousands of former patients, who have come to it from all over the States, Canada, and many foreign lands. A written request will bring you a free copy of the book, in plain wrapper, without placing you under any obligation.

Turning Back Time With Incidents of Year 1912

Old Calgary Newspaper of Dec. 31, 1912 Tells of Important News of That Day

(From The High River Times)

Mr. Chapman of the U.G.G. has recently unearthed an issue of the Morning Albertan, dated December 31, 1912. This is not of an great vintage, but things were different, even in those days. For instance, Calgary's building permits for 1912 were $20,394,000, over eight million in excess of 1911. These did not include the Palliser nor the Hudson Bay store, but did include C.P.R. shops, 52 warehouses and factories, 100 business buildings, 2500 residences, 12 schools, 4 theatres, 12 churches, 4 firehalls, 4 garages, etc., etc.

Editorial comment is: "In Canada the year has been marked by great expansion, railroad extension and western development. — Borden's naval policy is freely discussed. — Britain stays neutral in the Balkan war with Bulgaria, Serbia and Greece fighting against Turkey. The Turk is an alien conqueror and is being defeated."

Women Run Wild

In England the suffragettes were expressing themselves. Suffragettes set fire to Lewis Harcourt's summer home, tried to burn the theatre at Dublin when Asquith was there, and brought women's suffrage in the old land into disrepute.

Pulse Beats In West

A Saskatchewan doctor claims that pulse beat in the east is from 60 to 72 and in the west from 80 to 120.

Six Great Events

Great events of 1912 were the Balkan war, the Titanic disaster, the finding of the south pole, the birth of Progressives in the U.S.A.

Two animals will be sent from Wainwright Buffalo Park to Ireland. . . . United States wants $3,000,000 to train men for military aviation. . . . Fernie has a snowslide at Coal Creek which killed 4 and injured five. . . . Rumors of atrocities in the Belgian Congo.

"How much cash will Calgarians squander on welcoming the Glad New Year? Charlie Bell of the King George says $25,000. Corona predicts $30,000. Fred Adams of the Alexandra says $40,000."

The German Kaiser gave Xmas presents to retainers of about $25,000. Gifts to his grandchildren were dominated by soldiers, cannon and dreadnaughts.

"Can a girl lead a respectable life in an Alberta city on $10 a week? Probation officers say not."

For the thirsty, prices indicate the "good old days" when liquor was sold in hamper. —One hamper, 12 bottles, weight 50 pounds for $5.50—2 rye, 2 port, 2 Catawba wine, 1 brandy, 1 Scotch, 1 gin, 1 claret, 1 California wine, 1 ginger wine.

In those days the "Help Wanted" columns carried 26 ads for help, compared with the seven ads for situations wanted. Everyone had work or could get it.

A Glance Backward By Dean Howes

Reminiscences of Alberta University Professor, "Old Home Week" for Easterners

In this age when humanity is all awry, a most refreshing breeze comes from the pages of Dean Howes' new book "With a glance backward." Dean Howes' radio talks have been a joy to all his hearers, and his humorous reminiscent style runs irresistibly through in his latest book. It is the homely story of the Eastern Canadian familiar to all those in their fifties and sixties—the red schoolhouse, the community church, the cheese factory, the songs that were sung, the books that were read, the amusements enjoyed; the round of work and pleasure of the simple pioneer days. Times have changed in the east since those good old days, and Dean Howes has done a great service in thus perpetuating such a vivid and faithful picture of the recent past.

Young people will enjoy the reading as a background for the present—a glimpse of the generation that probably more than any other, developed the Dominion of Canada.

This is a rich and delightful book. Albertans can be proud that one of our own university heads had the gift and the will to write it. It is hoped it has the wide reading which it deserves. The Oxford University Press, University Ave., Toronto 2, has had the honor of publishing it, and the price is $1.50.

Tuberculosis can be wiped out in this country. One way to speed this disease toward eradication is to buy and use Christmas seals.

Treasury Branches Face Reckoning

Treasury Branches Show Increasing Deficit in Operation Contrast to Chartered Banks

During the session coming up, and the election campaign, the government is going to have to defend the Treasury Branches which have been in operation for over a year, and have proved the most costly experiment so far made by the government.

Up to the present these have cost taxpayers more than $650,000. In the past six months the deficit was more than twice as great as the previous six months, according to the government's own figures. On Sept. 20 the total deposits were $1,114,000. The deficit to that date was $139,000. On a 12 month basis the cost to taxpayers of having these deposits is over 25% of the deposits per year.

This is in sharp contrast to the much criticized chartered banks. Being unable to dip into public treasury for expenses, the banks operate at an average cost of 3% per annum of the money they handle. General cost of operation, wages and interest to depositors are $5,000,000 for every $100,000,000 of assets. They have revenues on the other side from interest from borrowers, government securities, etc., and they hope that this revenue will bring in an average of a little more than 3% of total assets. Alberta's experiment in banking is thus costing taxpayers more than eight times as much as chartered banks allow themselves, without providing a fraction of the service.

That operating cost of the treasury branches does not include the $450,000 in capital expenditure paid out of the treasury in the past year for administration costs and buildings, which include in operating costs. The deficit does not include small amounts in bonus for purchase of Alberta made goods. Over a year this indicates a turnover through treasury branches of less than $500,000 in Alberta-made goods which would have been sold anyway. —Okotoks Review.

The two enemy aliens who escaped from the internment camp at Kananaskis, have finally been captured. 150 R.C.M.P. rangers, etc., were hunting them, but they were identified at a garage in Calgary and picked up by the police.

White Papers And Blue Papers

What is the difference between a British "White Paper" and "Blue Book?"

Britain issues an enormous mass of documents which are usually published by His Majesty's Stationery Office. Most of the material thus issued is of a routine description, and is generally bound in blue paper covers. Hence the term Blue Book.

A White Paper in Britain is simply a Blue Book from which the cover of blue has been omitted, either to save expense or to save time. Usually White Papers are issued to meet some special and immediate situation. For instance, the earlier account of Anglo-German negotiations appeared as a Blue Book, but the later narrative by Sir Neville Henderson, British Ambassador to Berlin, of interviews on the eve of war was issued as a White Paper.

The symbol "C." "Cmd" or "Cd" means that the Blue Book or White Paper is issued "By Command" of some authority, either Parliament or the Crown.

Time To Call A Halt

War debate flared in the B.C. house again on Monday. It is perhaps pertinent to ask at this time just what the C.C.F. members and those who support their policies and actions expect to achieve.

Their efforts are entirely obstructionist in the face of overwhelming support throughout Canada for the war effort. They have been permitted to give vent to expressions which have without a doubt been contrary to the Defence of Canada Regulations. Their tactics have been akin to those which caused France to ban the Communist party there and lodge many of the leaders in jail.

It was The Leader's opinion, given some weeks ago, that the Provincial House having no jurisdiction over war policy, no debate on it should be allowed. The Province can hardly be proud of what has occurred. Now it is surely time to call a halt. The public has had quite enough upon which to judge just where the C.C.F. stands.

It is very evident that the leaders of this party and some of its supporters have no will to assist in the war effort. In this time of crisis, however, they should at least have the decency to allow the great majority, seeing a duty to be performed, to go about doing that duty. They have no right to continue to interfere with and obstruct democratically constituted authority at such a time as this.

It may be well to give some thought to what is to happen after the war, but other considerations have a prior claim. The C.C.F. is not asking what will happen if Hitlerism wins the war. —Cowichan Leader.
